Pollinator Visits Across a Meadow Transect

Authors: ForkTheFuture Example Lab

We counted bee and hoverfly visits to clover along a 200 metre transect over six summer mornings. Visits peaked mid-morning and declined after light rain. Species richness was higher near the hedgerow edge.

This note is descriptive field data and contains no kinematic, battery or queueing model.

ForkTheFuture sample handout. Self-authored for this repository. License: CC BY 4.0.